EFFICIENCY AND SECRECY.

SIR JOHN FRENCH'S report shows that the retreat of the allies was not solely for strategic purposes. He admits that they were beaten by the Germans in superior numbers and were forced back so rapidly that the British army escaped capture only by a narrow margin. The Germans attempted to encircle the British and shut them up in the fortress of Maubeuge, but Field Marshal French, with the aid of the French cavalry, succeeded in extricating himself from a most disheartening position.

The success of the Germans in concealing the point at which they were to strike the heaviest blow speaks highly for their generalship. By means of an immense screen of cavalry they concealed the movements of two or three army corps directed against the left of the allies, while permitting the allies to observe the movements of two other army corps moving in the same direction. In consequence of this strategy the British believed that they were facing only 80,000 men, whereas in fact they were confronted by 160,000 or 200,000.

In spite of this move the Germans failed in their enveloping movement because the allies retreated with great skill and rapidity to a strong position while retaining the full fighting force of their army. The German "hook" made a wide sweep almost to the gates of Paris, but its prey was not caught. The result was that the allies were able to form in a concave line, reaching from Paris on their left to Verdun on their right, and the German turning movement as it swept southwestward struck the French center and was held fast. Then General French began a turning movement as a counter stroke and fell upon the German right, pushing it back across the Marne river and crowding it toward the German center, while the French hammered away in the center and drove the Germans back in some confusion.

SANE POINT OF VIEW.

THE Republican senators who opposed the rivers and harbors bill, carrying $53,000,000, struck the nail on the head when they asserted that if this pernicious measure were killed the $100,000,000 war revenue measure would not be necessary. Senators and representatives professing to be statesmen would do well to eliminate the "pork barrel" from further consideration at this time. Outside of the congressional districts where the graft is to be distributed the whole country is opposed to the rivers and harbors bill. Now that it is necessary to raise $100,000,000 to supply a treasury deficit this opposition is likely to take form at the polls if the bill is finally put over by the Democrats. Owing to the objections raised by President Wilson the proposal to raise the income tax will be abandoned and the ways and means committee is looking for some other way to secure the $100,000,000. It would be worth their while to read the speeches of the Republican senators on the rivers and harbors bill.

The ticker tells what cool, calculating men engaged in international trade think, no matter what they may say. Wheat broke sharply on stories of reverses sustained by German and Austrian armies. The price of wheat told the world that these traders believe that the war can be made short only by Germany's defeat. They believe that England and Russia are able to prolong the struggle for years, and the farther the Germans get into France the longer it will be. Such views are free from prejudice, for they are written in dollars and cents, representing fortunes lost and won by those who back their opinions of the positions of the armies in the field by taking positions of their own in the grain markets of the world.

The late lamented Bertram McIntosh was the political backer of three defeated candidates for nominations on the Democratic ticket. Three times to bat without a hit stamps Bertram's true political hitting ability. This grandiose fellow once defied Nevada newspapers and with a sweep of his hand put forward his deft in the state senate against newspapers as an industry. Shortsighted and oblivious of consequences, Mr. McIntosh did not know that the breakers lay just ahead of him.—Fallon Standard.

Blood and iron is a prescription that Europe finds worse than the disease of international jealousy.—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

Washington hostesses will have the job of their lives this winter in keeping the diplomats sorted.—Springfield Republican.

Evidently the Belgian capital which the Germans desired was not Brussels, but the $40,000,000.

PRINCE OF PIOCHE TAKES CONTROL OF VIRGINIA LOUISE

ACQUISITION WILL GREATLY INCREASE THE TONNAGE FOR SHIPPING.

A deal was closed in this city yesterday the result of which is the Prince Consolidated Mining company has acquired a controlling interest in the Virginia-Louise Mining company, says the Pioche Record.

It is understood that the Prince company has taken over the stock holdings of the Lloyd estate and Chas. L. Horsey but that H. W. Rand and associates in Portland and St. Paul still retain their holdings in the Virginia-Louise company.

It is understood that it is the purpose to operate the Virginia property separately from the Prince company, that is to say the operating costs, revenues, etc., will be kept in accounts apart from each other or as two units.

The deal is regarded as a very important one, not only for the shareholders of the Prince company, but likewise to the shareholders of the Virginia-Louise. The acquisition of the property which lies adjacent to the Prince greatly adds to the available tonnage of ore of the Prince company, while with the facilities for transportation afforded by the Prince equipment makes these reserves at once within the reach of the markets because of the reduced costs of getting the ore to the smelter.

The Virginia property is equipped with a double compartment shaft, sunk to a depth of 46 feet, which cut an ore body showing for 160 feet in the shaft and 150 feet in width. Another ore body was encountered beneath the first one showing in the shaft for 20 feet and 160 feet in width. This last ore body is dipping about 17 degrees and the indications are that it extends for 1,500 feet in the property. These ore bodies are said to be the same from which the Prince Consolidated has been shipping 200 tons per day for the last two years.

TUNGSTEN ORES ARE IN DEMAND

The United States geological survey has received many inquiries concerning investments in the stock of certain tungsten companies. In general it may be said that tungsten mining if properly conducted, is probably as safe financially as other forms of mining. It is not, however, within the province of the federal survey to give advice on the purchase of particular stocks or on the condition of particular mining properties or individual mines beyond that included in the survey's published reports. To inquire, however, it is usually stated:

"The survey will venture the advice that no mining stocks of any kind should be bought unless the property has been carefully examined either by the buyer or by some one who has a knowledge of mines and in whom the buyer has confidence. Unless the buyer has a knowledge of minerals, mines, and mining, his own opinion is, of course, unsafe. Besides knowing the ground itself, a prospective investor should be sure of the integrity of the promoters and company officers, and of the officers' capacity for conducting the mining, milling, and numerous other operations connected with the working of a mine. Unless all these things are known, the survey would advise against investment in the stock."

There have been some notoriously audacious and dishonest promotions of tungsten deposits. Companies have been greatly overcapitalized, extravagant claims as to future production and profits have been made, and the unwary have been led to put their money into properties from which little return has been or probably will be realized. Only a very small part of the subscribed capital has gone into the development or operation of the mining properties. Probably the reason why so many have been led to invest is that investors, lacking knowledge of tungsten and its ores, are not in a position to judge of the truth of the statements made by promoters.

Don't Lose Your Nerve

Nearly every one needs a good nerve tonic occasionally. This is especially true at this season when the hot weather has taxed the nervous system to the fullest extent.

To overcome this run-down nerve-racking condition, you need something to nourish the nerve centers, enrich the blood and tone up the digestive organs.

OUR CELERY NERVEINE is a good tonic for this purpose. It is pleasant to take and quick in results. Especially good for women and children. Price $1.00.
